

Take Me!

Hello.

The book that you hold in your hand meant something to somebody at some point in their lives. If you leaf through it you should find the story of exactly that. It might be at the front in those blank pages reserved for dedications. It might be at the back in those empty pages that are a byproduct of the printing process. It might be scribbled on the back of this sheet or it might be written neatly on a torn out piece of paper from a notebook.

However you find it, it tells the story of its owner, what it meant to them, how it changed their life, and why they wanted you – whoever you are – to have it.

Please take it, read it, and if you're feeling generous find a copy of a book that has done the same for you and leave it somewhere at the festival with your own story inside for someone else to find.

EMERGING WRITERS' FESTIVAL

Let others know that you've found this book:

- Tweet with the hashtags - #ewfbook #ewf11
- Send an email to books@emergingwritersfestival.org.au
- Write a short message and drop it into the box in Rue Bebelons.